These are far from the objects the Democrats who joined them expected to attain, and they resemble the travelers in the desert of Sahara; so gradually have the evidences o vegetation disappeared, that they can hardly realize they are surrounded by a trackless wilderness of sand: to proceed is destruction, and to return they have only bleaching bones to point the pathway; but every motive of patriotism bids them return. It seems a hard alternative, but they should accept it without hesitation. We know some who have "sought the bubble reputation, even in the cannon's mouth;" others who met Santa Anna on that field of Buena Vista, and others again who have faced a "frowning world" in asserting their religious convictions, and have urged others so to do; and we cannot believe that such men will hesitate at the call of duty, although they must endure the sneers of those who preach a "foolish consistency."

Those in middle life who went out from the Democratic party, after having served years under the leadership of Jackson and Polk, and other great captains; by whom the principles of Jefferson were received among the earliest lessons of childhood, must find themselves in strange companionship, surrounded by the fragments of Federalism and Freesoilism, and must acknowledge, if they would speak candidly, that they "have forsaken the right way and gone astray, and followed the way of Balaam the son of Bosor."

Executive Department.

Another abundant harvest has been gathred; another year of multiplied blessings is farmer, the mechanic, the manufacturer, and the merchant, the professional man and the man of science, have been abundantly reward. ed: commerce has revived, trade has improved, and thrift is apparent every where throughout the land. Neither war nor pestilence nor famine has afflicted us. Peace, plenty, and health have blessed a free, prosperous, and happy people. Providence has showered His blessings upon us as individuals, as a State, as nation. We should return to Him the homage of grateful hearts. In the eager pursuit of pleasure, of fortune, or of fame-in the excitement of our daily occupations-in the multiform pursuits of life, we are too apt to forget Him from whom these bounties come Acknowledging no sovereign but Him, let us recognize the venerable custom of the "Jewish Feast of Weeks appointed by Jehovah for his chosen people." For the establishment of, and preservation then, of our free institutions -for the preservation of our lives and health —for our tranquility, prosperity, and happiness—for our general thrift and the untold blessings we enjoy as a State and a people-

DIED.

In this county, Nov. 8, at the residence of his father, . R. Crutcher, REUBEN B. CRUTCHER, in the 22d ear of his age.

Lines. An affectionate tribute to the memory of our little darling, Fannie H. Chinn.

She came like a spirit of brightness in Spring-The gift of a passing Angel's wing-A vision of beauty befitting the sky-Too lovely to live, too dear to die.

With its blush-tinted leaves but half blown apart, Exhaled sweeter fragrance love's hearthstone to Whose blight e'er awoke a more sorrowful tear.

She has passed, but her memory will ever seem In the hearts that so loved her like a beautiful dream: She came with the flowers, more lovely than they,

Yet in Autumn, with them, she has faded away. We will miss from our circle her fairy-like form; Will miss her sweet voice, with its bird-like charm;

The kiss of her lips, once so rosy and warm, And the sweet tiny clasp of her soft snowy arm. Be not parents so grieved that the grave doth inclose

The dear form on thy bosom oft soothed to repose

The spirit which made it so endearing and bright

Has filed to its source, and His Temple of Light. Too frail was our darling for life's wintry breath; In mercy she was tak'n by the Angel of death, And now with the Seraphs, on her silver white wings,

She floats round the Throne and divinely sings. Proclamation by the Governor.

Henri Du Barre, a young French artist, became enamored of the only daughter of a wellto-do aubergiste, in the town of Carcassone, in the south of France. Lucille Montaigne had beauty and money, and Henri Du Barre had wit and talent; but these latter were no fair equivalent for the former in the miserly eyes

Now Lucille loved Henri—at least she told him so-but she was too prudent to elope with him and risk disinheritance; for, after all, what was love without money?-poverty, Nismes, fearful of spending one of his ill-accoming in at the door, would send it flying through the window.

Poor Henri was in despair. He really did Lucille, whether she did him or notloved her madly; and his was one of those dark, fiery natures which makes love a wild, terrible passion.

How much money was necessary to make father? The aubergiste named the sum. It brightened up with the recollection that he

But would Lucille wait? Well, Lucille was willing to wait awhile—just then, as she admitted to herself, she could think of no one she liked better than the poor artist; but everything earthly must have a limit, and the fair coquette thought her patience ought not to extend beyond a year.

A year is a very short time for a man to acquire fame and fortune, with the latter depending on the former; but Henri was young, and youth is sanguine, and at all events he would make a trial, hoping for great things, and knowing he could do no worse than fail. So he finished his engagements hurriedly, declined any new ones, sold the few pictures

Being an artist, he at length naturally conceived the idea of painting the scene of the murder; and he finally drew in miniature, on ivory, picturing himself in the act of dragging the dead body of the Jew into the forest, whose features, from memory only, he delineated with wonderful fidelity. And as if this were not enough to satisfy his morbid infatuation, he wrote underneath: "Isaac, a Jew. murdered by Henri Du Barre, Artist, September the tenth, in a dark wood, about twenty

THE BIG BALLOON.—The great muslin globe at the Crystal Palace-square now contains about seventy six thousand feet of gas, or a little more than one-tenth of its entire capacity. The gas already admitted has a lifting power of m than a tun and a half, and the tendency of the huge bag to soar aloft on an independent voyage by itself, is counteracted by a great number of heavy sand tags, which are attached to the netting by hooks-their position being changed as the balloon swells under the inward flow of gas. Every slight breeze sways the vast dome (nor more than thirty feet high and seventy-five feet across) to and fro, and threatens to whisk it away but the ponderous sand bags keep it steadily to its moorings. But for the great thickness and strength of the canvas, it would be torn by the constant flapping to which it is subjected. It is difficult to understand how Prof. Lowe will manage this bulky balloon when it is half or three quarters full. A heavy wind would blow it to pieces, and nothing but the conjunction of two fair days will enable the Professor to fill up and get away in safety. The last admission of gas, preparatory to the ascension, will occupy about eight hours. The public will be sure of one day's notice of the time when this grand aerial flight will take place. Meanwhile, the balloon and its equipments are objects of great interest. and its equipments are objects and are visited by thousands of people daily.

correspondent of the Presbyterian says: "By the way, speaking of Edinburgh, while there I acted as guide to a brother minister from America, on a visit to the tomb of the infidel Hume. It is a circular stone building; over its iron-grated door there is inscribed his name, with the dates of his birth and death. No doubt, like Voltaire, he flattered himself that he had given the death-blow to Christianity. But behold, there on the wall of his tomb, those who were flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone, bear testimony to the fallacy of his expectation. outside, and immediately above the name of Hum himself, there is a tablet containing an inscription, by a David Hume, to his wife, Jane Alder, dated 1817, closing with these words, 'Behold, I come quickly. Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.' Also, in the interior, there is another tablet, sacred to the memory of David Hume, one of the Barons of Exchequer, and his two sons, dated in 1848; the whole surmounted by these encouraging words, 'I am the Resurection and the Life.'

MERCHAN'TS
visiting Louisville should not fail to procure the Vesper Gas Fixtures for their stores.

Churches, Hotels, Public Halls, and Private Residences throughout the State can now be fived up with these elegant and convenient chandeliers, and other beautiful gas fixtures, which add so much to the appearance of such piaces and to the comfort of the home circle, and which heretofore could be used only in those favored districts embraced within the coalgas limits of large cities.

The limited space of an advertisement precludes the insertion here of the numerous testimonials of approval we have received from all quarters. Suffice it to say, scientific men and others who have examined and thoroughly tested the merits of the Vesper Gas Light, pronounce it the best and cheapest artificial light now known.
